Reflections from the Administrator's Desk

Within the Magnificat Mass Journal for Christmas Day I read this wonderful meditation by St Pope Paul VI. As we reflect upon the birth of Jesus Christ in our mind's eye, this event "is reflected, renewed like an image in a mirror in each of our souls; and in a moment it will be renewed in a mystical and sacramental form, with a mysterious realism on this altar. Here Christ will be with us. A special attraction holds our attention and invites us to contemplate. Here our attention can take two paths. One is that of the historical, perceptible scene evoked by the Gospel of Luke ...the scene of the crib, the idyllic scene of the poor make-shift lodging chosen by the two pilgrims, Mary and Joseph. Everything interests us here: the night, the cold, the poverty, the solitude; and, then, heaven opening up, the incomparable message of the angels, the arrival of the shepherds. The imagination reconstructs the details, framing a story that holds us spellbound, [like] children again & to savor a moment of delight. But our spirit is drawn by another path of reflection: the prophetic path. Who is the One who is born? The announcement that resounds this same night tells us exactly: to you is born this day a Savior, who is Christ the Lord. The event at once takes on a marvelous quality: that of a goal attained. What is before us is not merely a fact, great & moving as it may be, of a new human being entering the world; [the] plan that spans the centuries, that comprises those events, dissimilar & spaced out, happy & unhappy, which describe the formation of a people, and that of a choice, of a vocation, of a promise, of a destiny, of a unique & sovereign man, a King, a Savior. Let us pay great attention to this aspect of Christmas. It is a point of arrival, which reveals and testifies to a line preceding it, a divine thought, a mystery operating in the succession of the ages. The birth of Christ marks on the dial of the centuries the destined moment of the fulfilment of this divine plan which serenely dominates the rushing torrent of human history. It indicates the fullness of time of which Saint Paul speaks. The distant prophecy of Isaiah comes true: Lo, a child is born to us, a Son has been given to us.... The empire will be great and peace endless upon the throne of David and in his kingdom. He will establish it and uphold it with justice and righteousness, now and forever. This little Jesus of Bethlehem is the central point of human history; in him are concentrated all human journeyings. On this night, in this place, at this meeting the choice is easy, it is sweet, it is strong; and everyone can say with a heart exulting with joy: He came for me!"
